An Outstanding Resume in the Eye of the Recruiters – Roy Wattanasin and Kitty Huang

Congratulations for making it to the interview. You are very close to being the chosen one. Then, the interviewers ask you, “What’s your greatest weakness?” or “Why did you leave your last job?” They know if you try to avoid the question. They know if you are not being sincere. Your choice of words, demeanor, and approach to touch questions all makes an important impact on whether you receive an offer letter or “thank you but no thanks” letter. This workshop provides communication skills that can best present you during the interview.
